Passage A:

Just like other places in the world, Hawaii has its own rules of etiquette. Etiquette includes good manners and the way one is expected to act. Here are some tips on customs and etiquette in Hawaii that are good to know in case you travel there.

The most important time to remember to have good manners is when you visit someone's home. Most people in Hawaii take their shoes off before entering a house. Forgetting to do so can be seen as very rude. Therefore, if you're unsure whether or not you should remove your shoes, take a look around. If there are lots of shoes in the entryway, take yours off. Otherwise, ask the host to be sure.

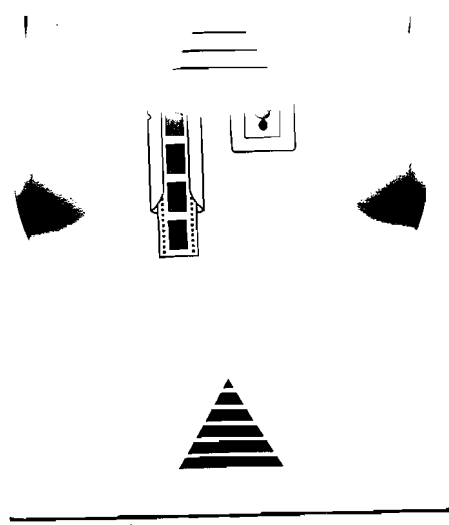

You should also bring a small gift, such as a dessert, when visiting. This action often turns a get-together into a potluck, with everyone bringing some food to share. After an event, guests are expected to take a plate of food home with them. You will either be asked to make one for yourself, or be offered one by the host. Even if you do not intend to eat the food, taking the plate shows good manners. It is said to be impolite to leave a host with large amounts of leftovers.

No matter where you travel in the world, take some time to look into the local customs and etiquette beforehand. By doing so, you show proper respect for others and their culture, thus reducing the chance of hurting anyone's feelings.

1. Which is an example of etiquette?
 - A. Shaking someone's hand when you meet him or her.
 - B. Waking up early in the morning.
 - C. Visiting a local museum.
 - D. Asking someone for directions while traveling.

Passage B:

Music began with early Christian groups singing and worshiping. This early form of music was called chanting. Historically, there are no records of this because music notation had not been developed yet, therefore its transmission was oral. Around 600 A.D. there was some disagreement about how to sing during religious services due to the variety of musical dialects. Pope Gregory the First knew there was danger and sent monks all over to see how the different priests were chanting in their services. This led to a meeting which caused the creation of an official way in which Christian songs should be sung and became known as the Gregorian Chant.

There are three types of Gregorian Chant: syllabic, neumatic, and melismatic. Syllabic chants are usually sung by a congregation because they are the easiest to sing. This is a simple chant with one note for each syllable. The neumatic chant with approximately three to five notes per syllable can be sung by a congregation but is usually performed by a soloist. The last type of chant, melismatic, can have up to 100 notes per syllable and must be sung by an advanced vocalist.

Another distinguishing feature of Gregorian chants is that they are monodic. Monodic means that they only contain one line of music at a time, which can be sung by an individual or a group of people all at the same time. In contrast, polyphonic music has more than one line of music at the same time and all of these lines can not possibly be sung by the same person. This music was created because composers became frustrated with the monodic structure of the Gregorian chant.

5. What is the main topic of the passage?
- A. Monodic Music
B. The Early History of Music
C. Polyphonic Music
D. The Life of Pope Gregory I
6. Why are there no records of early music?
- A. They had no way of writing down musical notes.
B. Writing hadn't been invented yet.
C. Each church wanted to keep their music a secret.
D. It was dangerous to write music down.
7. What are the types of Gregorian Chant mentioned in the passage?
- A. monodic, polyphonic, and neumatic
B. melismatic, syllabic, and monodic
C. syllabic, neumatic, and melismatic
D. polyphonic, syllabic, and melismatic
8. According to the passage, which kind of chant is the most difficult?
- A. syllabic
B. neumatic
C. melismatic
D. monodic
9. Why was polyphonic music created?
- A. Songwriters were fed with the limited possibilities of monodic music.
B. The Pope feared that Gregorian Chants would not be accepted by all of the religious groups.
C. Monodic music became unpopular with the congregations.
D. Composers did not understand how to write monodic music.
10. What paragraph would most likely follow this passage?
- A. Examples of the three types of Gregorian Chant
B. Other types of music sung in church
C. A history of the popes who succeeded Pope Gregory I
D. Information about the different kinds of polyphonic music
